Action on Employability in English - an English: Shared Futures Satellite Event Speakers

Dr. Andrea Macrae is a Principal Lecturer for Stylistics and Student Experience at Oxford Brookes University, with expertise in employability, skills literacy and enterprise in HE English. She can be reached at andrea.macrae@brookes.ac.ukDr.

Dr. Matt Evans is a Lecturer at the University of Huddersfield, with expertise in stylistics. He can be reached at m.b.evans@hud.ac.uk

Dr Sara Wasson is Lecturer in Gothic Studies at Lancaster University, and Academic Employability Champion for the Department of English Literature and Creative Writing. She has a postgraduate diploma in mentoring and coaching, and is also particularly interested in assignment innovation to foster independent learning, and action research around building student confidence and visual qualitative data capture. After the excellent ESF event she is also keen to develop enterprise resources. Sara can be reached at s.wasson@lancaster.ac.uk

Prof. James Annesley is Head of the School of English Literature, Language and Linguistics at Newcastle University and Professor of American Literature. He leads on employability for the School. James can be reached at james.annesley@ncl.ac.uk

Dr Chloe Harrison is Lecturer in English Language and Literature at Aston University, Birmingham, where she researches in cognitive poetics, reader response and contemporary fiction. She is Programme Director for English Literature and Placement Coordinator for the integrated placements year. She can be reached at c.harrison10@aston.ac.uk

Ben Robertson is an award-winning careers & employability professional, Fellow of the Higher Education Academy (FHEA) and a member of the AGCAS Creative Industries Task Group, experienced in creating innovative online career development learning programmes for students. Ben currently works with students and academic programmes in the arts and humanities at Leeds Beckett University and can be reached at: b.robertson@leedsbeckett.ac.uk

Prof Katy Shaw leads research into twenty-first century writings at Northumbria University. She is a public intellectual, literary festival host, media presenter and Twitterer. She can be reached at katy3.shaw@northumbria.ac.uk